

CREW TRAVEL

Warnings of summer travel chaos in Europe

Eurocontrol, which manages European airspace, issued the warning as the peak summer season began, with about 33,000 daily flights expected across Europe for the next eight weeks. The figure represents about an 8 per cent increase on 2022's numbers.

FOR THE FULL STORY:

<https://www.thetimes.co.uk/article/warnings-of-summer-travel-chaos-in-europe-6klzqj67d>

Why airline delays and cancellations are so bad: It's not just the weather

Hundreds of thousands of US airline customers were stranded this week as severe weather grounded planes and led to cancelled flights. But storms were only one factor behind the travel nightmare. Staffing shortages, at both US airlines and the Federal Aviation Administration's air traffic control operations, took a bad situation and made it worse.

FOR THE FULL STORY:

<https://www.cnn.com/2023/06/28/business/air-travel-woes/index.html>

Global aviation outlook: Air fares climb higher amid the unprecedented recovery of travel

Demand for air travel is proving resilient despite higher ticket prices. Passengers returned rapidly in 2022 and the recovery will continue this year and next. This is primarily being driven by leisure, but business travel is picking up too. Meanwhile, staff shortages and delivery delays for newly-ordered aircraft are a challenge for airlines

FOR THE FULL STORY:

<https://think.ing.com/articles/global-aviation-outlook-air-fares-climb-amid-unprecedented-recovery-of-travel/>

CREW TRAVEL

Flight attendants' secrets for surviving summer travel

Should you haul yourself out of bed in the middle of the night to be on the first flight of the day? Should you pack snacks or rely on airplane food? Who should you turn to if your flight is canceled?

FOR THE FULL STORY:

<https://edition.cnn.com/travel/article/flight-attendants-secrets-surviving-summer-travel/index.html>

Norse Atlantic starts two more US services from Gatwick

Long-haul start-up airline Norse Atlantic Airways has started operating to two new US destination from its UK base at London Gatwick.

The Oslo-based carrier has launched services from Gatwick to Los Angeles and San Francisco – the airline's fifth and sixth US destinations from the London airport.

FOR THE FULL STORY:

<https://www.businesstravelnewseurope.com/Air-Travel/Norse-Atlantic-starts-two-more-US-services-from-Gatwick>

Here's how you can make air travel a little better for the climate

Borgar Aamaas is a researcher at CICERO with a background in meteorology and climate. He has compiled a short list of possible ways to reduce emissions from flying:

FOR THE FULL STORY:

<https://sciencenorway.no/carbon-footprint-climate-change-greenhouse-gas-emissions/heres-how-you-can-make-air-travel-a-little-better-for-the-climate/2209041>

CREW TRAVEL

Inside The US DOT's April 2023 Air Travel Consumer Report

The latest Air Travel Consumer Report (ATCR) has been released by the United States Department of Transportation (DOT). It covers operational data such as airline on-time performance, mishandling of baggage, wheelchairs, scooters, and live animals, and involuntarily denied boarding of passengers due to airline overselling.

FOR THE FULL STORY:

<https://simpleflying.com/united-states-department-transportation-april-2023-air-travel-consumer-report/>

The growth of air travel between China and Saudi Arabia

In recent years, the relationship between China and Saudi Arabia has grown stronger, leading to an increased demand for air travel between the two countries.

In 2022, over 1.5 million passengers flew between China and Saudi Arabia. The most popular routes are between Beijing and Riyadh, and between Shanghai and Jeddah.

FOR THE FULL STORY:

<https://aviationsourcenews.com/analysis/the-growth-of-air-travel-between-china-and-saudi-arabia/>

BREAKING THE

m041d

YACHTING RE-IMAGINED

